

Cost & Revenue Management in Higher Education

Higher education institutions have faced increasing financial pressures for many years. In the spring of 2020 as COVID lockdowns took effect, higher education leaders looked to their CFOs for answers as institutions considered the economic impact of numerous scenarios that were being considered.

Most institutions' CFOs attempted to acquire data that would reinforce the economic analysis of various scenarios being evaluated. However, institutions that had a robust cost and revenue analytics capability were able to readily access data and conduct extensive analyses immediately.

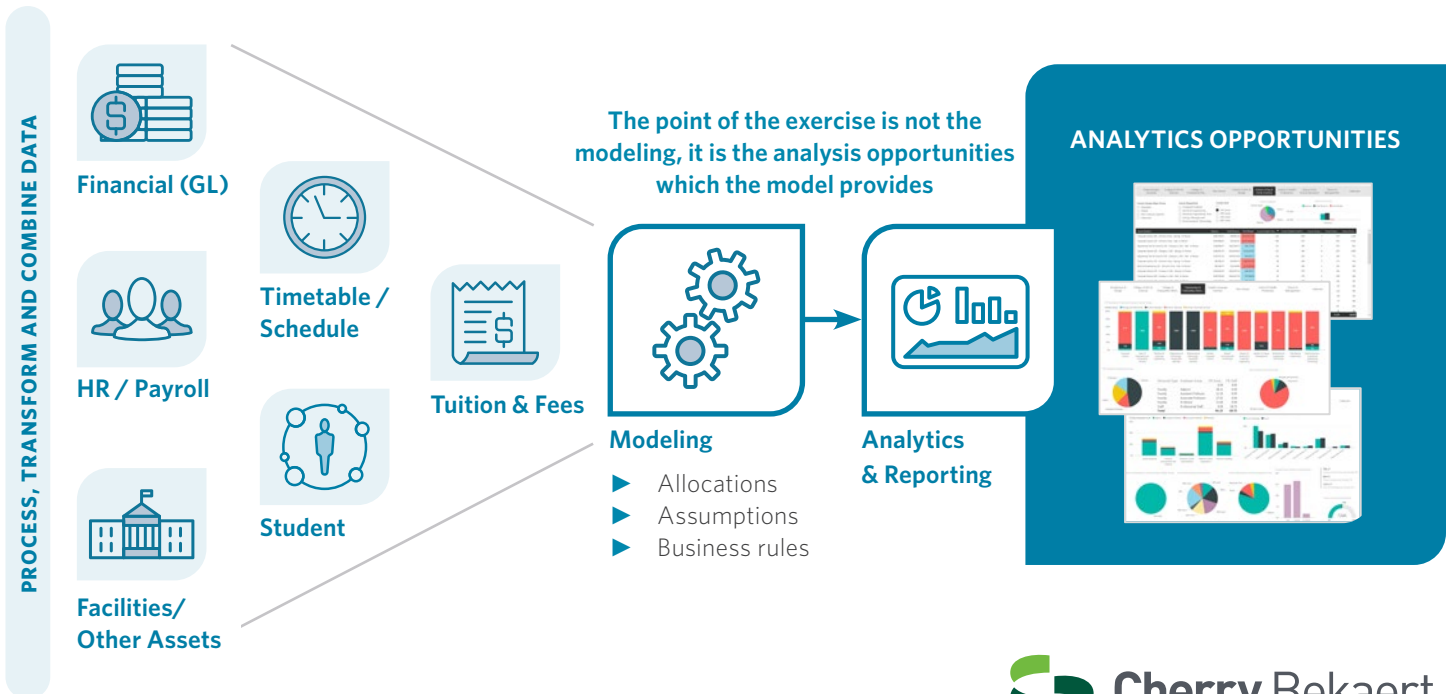

Today's current environment provides institutions with a "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity to leverage robust cost and revenue analytics in support of strategic initiatives that are changing the face of higher education.

Cherry Bekaert's Digital Advisory practice provides strategic and tactical support to institutions, positioning them for long-term growth. In addition, we improve performance by transforming business models - leveraging technology and data as the core to their competitive advantage.

Areas of Focus

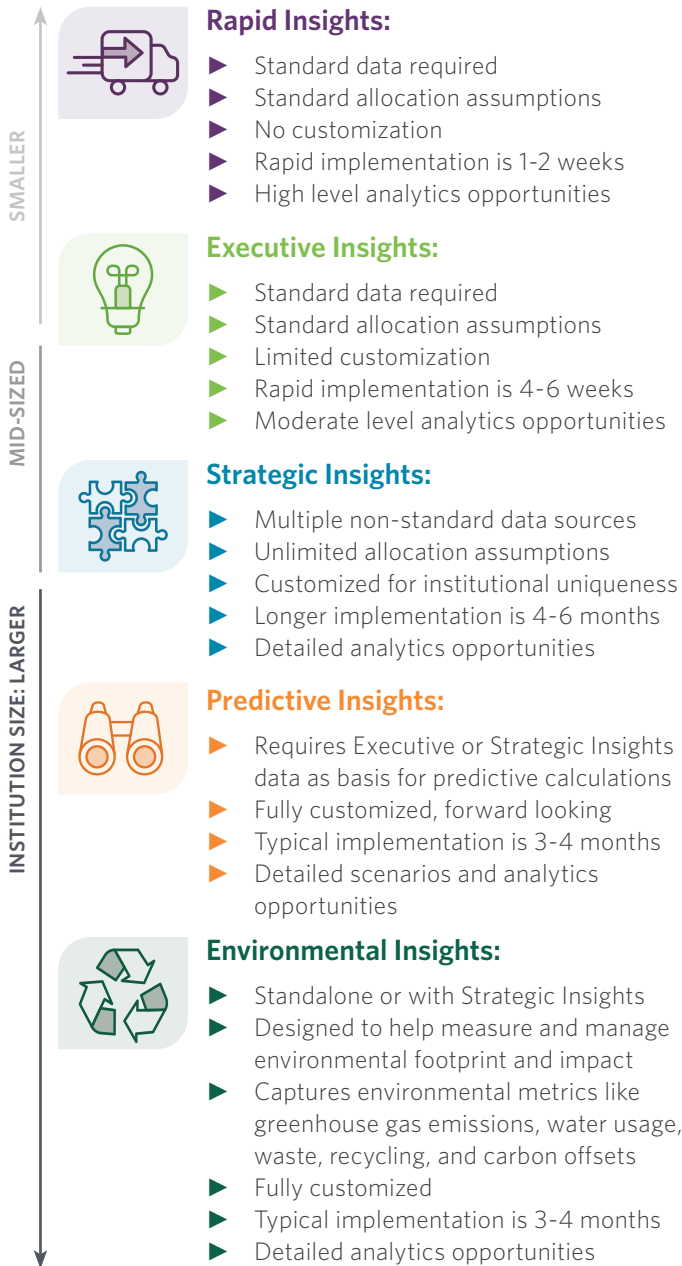

Our Cost and Revenue Management offerings focus on the following key components:

- ▶ What is spent and who spends it? The direct and indirect costs expended by the institution.
- ▶ What revenues are earned and for what purpose? The revenue earned across the institution, including tuition, fees, grants, and auxiliary income.
- ▶ What is produced/delivered? The outputs of the institution, including courses, programs, research, community services, and auxiliaries.

Cherry Bekaert has multiple cost and revenue management/ analytics offerings, all of which capture institution-wide direct and indirect costs, designed to meet the needs of any higher education institution.
